Counsel,

As you know from Plaintiff's Motion for Clarification and the Court's Order on it, Plaintiff will not be limited to comparing two of her manuscripts to the offending materials but rather those manuscripts are simply a starting point. While Plaintiff objected to even initially comparing the offending 4 books to only two manuscripts, she certainly understands the value in starting with a more limited subset of her work, and in footnote 2 of her motion stated that she would be willing to identify 6 (six) manuscripts and a subset of notes as a more limited basis to commence the analysis, provided that you realize that she is technically suing based on all of the registered materials. As a courtesy to Defendants, we identify those documents below:
